

DIGNITY PLUS SELF-RESPECT= SELF ESTEEM

Thirty-five Thousand young Americans have come home from our current wars with physical wounds that our government can never make whole. These Veterans have led the way in our fight to make our lives safer. Now after receiving medical care, these bravest men and women are returned to their families; often without the ability or the resources to restart their lives.

The fact that these special Americans stood up and answered the call when we needed them most is why the rest of us should now respond to their calls for support. Not being able to complete a simple task like doing their own laundry for lack of a washing machine, or not having a working refrigerator in their house is simply not fair. I know these things sound so basic, and it is hard to fathom that, in our country, the men and woman who stood up for us when we needed them are left in need themselves.

All that these deserving ladies and gentlemen want is the basics that we all take for granted. They're not asking for thousands of dollars to make them whole. They're just requesting that if we have unneeded household items, we donate them in an effort help our Veterans and their families return to the mainstream; that we make the effort to standup and do the right thing in their time of need.

If you can help, please follow the link below to donate items to these most deserving Veterans:
